Beyond the romanticism of handmade goods, lies a blueprint for a sustainable future.

Design intervention to rejuvenate crafts, to make durable and functional product, while retaining beauty and context.

Supporting livelihood in craft communities, giving employment back to villages, reducing waste of mass over-production.

Sourcing raw material from factory scrap, old utensils and melting and recycling of defective product reducing waste.

Crafts in India are rich and inspiring and yet they are dying slowly from a lack of freshness and access to new markets and contexts.
